Aviation Incident Services

Aviation claims fall into an incident category, an accident category, or both. Similarly, they also fall into a hull loss, liability loss, or both.

The coverages afforded by insurers are varied and range from basic to complex. We then add the unique language of the aviation industry and the myriad of different aircraft coupled with strictly controlled government rules and regulations. It then becomes readily apparent that losses need to be investigated and settled by adjusters with experience, and who are highly knowledgeable in addition to specialists in their field.

McLarens Canada has a team of aviation specialists who have extensive collective experience on claims associated with fixed wing, helicopter, ski and float planes, aircraft manufacturing companies, surveys, airport authorities, maintenance firms and flying clubs in addition to other entities involved in the aviation industry.

Our team of aviation specialists have experience as commercial and private pilots and have previously worked on, or had training in, various mechanical areas and/or airframes. Our Aviation Loss Adjusters have developed close working relationships with the various government agencies, which may offer our clients considerable benefit.
